‘Més que un club,’ Barça is Barcelona, Catalan culture, a symbol of resistance, a way of life. Football lives in the history, the players, the penyas. It lives in La Pulga, in Cruyff, in the Camp Nou roar where 90,000+ fans worship. This is football as opera. There is no bigger club.

“The night of Monday November 29, 2010. Mourinho’s league leaders Real Madrid arrived at Camp Nou in the mood to take El Clásico. But how our Blaugranas shut them down. It was perfection from Pep and the team, took the breath away, positional play, precision passing and mental speed that was out of this world. A 5-0 masterclass capped by two magical goals from David Villa. And we sing ‘Barça, Barça, Baaarça!’” - Jordi, Barcelona Supporters Club

DAY 1

We begin at our hand-selected hotel. On arrival take a moment to explore the neighborhood, grab a gintonic, and get settled in.

Next, we wander through the Barça barrios that birthed this most celebrated of clubs. You'll see signs of Catalan life and supporters' shirts on backs all around. Then it's the essential experience: a tour of the temple of football itself, the Camp Nou. From the tunnel to the changing room, the press area to the trophy cabinets, and the megastore to the pitch itself, this exclusive tour sets the scene. Next it's tapas, drinks, and football chat at one of Raval's best bars.

At Bar Masia, you'll join kindred spirits to sample vermut and chipirones in this Looking FC kick-off experience, and get the lowdown on the weekend to come with tastes, smells, and smiles you won't find anywhere else. Then more food at one of Raval's most secret eateries – nothing like the Cantona connection to open doors!

We drink, dine and talk Barça – but this is just the beginning!

DAY 2

Following a proper Catalan breakfast, we go football – and Barça – crazy! First, it's burn-the-shoe-leather time as we set the scene with a guided walk through Barcelona's iconic neighbourhoods and see where Barça was formed, the politics, the roots, and what the team motto "Mes que un club" truly means.

Then we hit Cabo Bar Marina for a proper tapas lunch. Nothing says Catalan like the laid-back tradition of eating tapas. It can get noisy, often messy, but always fun. The best part? The bill is on Eric. Don't forget to try the patatas bravas – a heap of perfectly fried potatoes topped with a subtly-tangy salsa. Deliciós!

After lunch, Peña Barcelonista Sant Antoni calls. In Barcelona, Peñas (football fan clubs) are everywhere. Sant Antoni is both a fan club and a social institution where members play darts and watch the games together. We talk to fans before meeting former footballer and sports agent, Jorge Santome Freire, for a Catalan football Masterclass. Then it's time to raise voices and learn the chants with the Sant Antoni fans – fully prepped for Sunday's big game.

The night is yet young, so after a rest back at The Corner, we'll hit San Antoni for fine food and drink as match day momentum builds.

DAY 3

Most of the day is dedicated to free time – music, museums, the beach, food markets, Picasso, Gaudi, the Sagrada Familia, Tibidabo... whatever takes your fancy, your Trip Captain will help.

Then it's football. The matchday vibe is everywhere as groups of fans philosophise on the game, the players, the team line-up, the chances and whether the Catalan giants can triumph over their rivals. Come late afternoon we don our Barcelona shirts and link up at Plaça de Osca for pre-game snacks and drinks with like-minded fellow fans as the excitement builds.

Finally, it's game time. Welcome to the Camp Nou. Welcome to the passion. The noise, the flares, the colour, 99,000 fans in this historic amphitheatre ready to cheer the Blaugrana on. There is nothing like it. And when the match is done, in proper Barcelona style, we'll go out on the town to celebrate, eat, drink and enjoy.

DAY 4

It's the morning after a match like no other. And win or lose (we're betting for a win), we'll be on a high. There's time for a final proper Catalan breakfast – perhaps a hearty bocadillo of marinated tuna, red pepper, anchovies and olives – and then it's goodbyes, to this city of dreams, to the greatest football team on earth, to Looking FC.

Until next time!
